

Men should not be allowed to play in women's sports. Men are typically stronger and faster than women, giving them a very unfair advantage. Apart from the physical disadvantage women have, it is also a moral issue. Men who play in women's sports do so because they are thoroughly confused, and bring shame to the sport. Transgender people should not be allowed to play in any sports. There should be harsh penalties for people who attempt to play or currently play in the sports that are meant for the opposite gender of them. Men playing in women's sports physically puts all of the women who deserve to play the sport at a large disadvantage, goes against what God says, and should be severely punished.

First of all, most men are stronger, bigger, and more athletic than most women. This is not to say anything bad about women, or say that they are weak, but merely a fact about the genetic makeup of people. Women's sports are designed for women to compete against women. The rules and gameplay of the sports is designed on purpose to not be accommodating to men. The same applies to men's sports, where they are not designed for women. For example, a women's track team might have a 100 yard race qualifying time of ten seconds, whereas the same race qualifying time for a men's team might be six seconds. If a man is not capable of competing in men's sports, and feels that he can win if he competes in women's sports, he should not even be playing the sport, but instead train until he is capable of competing in the men's sports. Just because someone is not good enough to compete in their own league, they should not go to a league where they will be dominant without trying. Women's sports are designed so women have to be competitive, active, and be able to be challenged. Men's sports are the exact same way. This is the same reason a Major League baseball player is not allowed to play on a local children's baseball league, or a NFL player can't compete on a high-school football team. Those people have a huge advantage over everyone else in the league. Those two examples are never questioned, and everyone understands why that doesn't happen, so why can't people understand that men shouldn't play in women's sports?

When men compete in women's sports, it is a moral issue. Because of the physical advantages men have, they undoubtedly know that they are likely much more capable of "winning" than the women are. Since the men know that they have a very unfair advantage, yet they still continue to play, they are purposefully cheating. Cheating in anything is immoral and goes against what God says in the Bible. Additionally, if a man thinks he is a woman, and therefore can participate in women's sports, he is also breaking God's commandments. God purposely made everyone male or female, and did not make it a choice. Genesis 1:27 NKJV says this: "So God created man in His own image; in the image of God He created him; male and female He created them." If God wanted people to switch their genders, He would have made them the opposite gender so they wouldn't even have to do anything. Men participating in women's sports is wrong because it is a form of cheating.

The punishment for men competing in women's sports, knowing it is wrong, should be severe. Everyone who competes in the sports intended for the opposite gender should be immediately kicked off of the team, and should ultimately be kicked out of the sport. Playing in the opposite gender's sports should go permanently on the player's sports record, where every new team or sport that the person plays or tries out for, can see that that person has played or attempted to play in a sport that they knowingly should not have. There should be very strict rules against playing in sports teams or leagues designed for the opposite gender. For a man to play women's sports, that would also mean that he can use the women's locker rooms, which is very wrong and sick. If a man uses women's restrooms or locker rooms, he should immediately be arrested and permanently banned from all sports. There is no reason that this should be allowed, and is very preventable. If people in charge of making the rules of sports would step up, face the problem, and address it, then we wouldn't have to deal with people playing the opposite gender's sports.

Men playing in women's sports is wrong physically and spiritually, and should be punished to the fullest extent. There is no reason that a man should play in women's sports, and vice versa. People wonder what is wrong with society today, but they turn a blind eye to issues such as this one and expect them to just go away. THEY WILL NOT GO AWAY ON THEIR OWN! Folks need to stand up for what is right and get this stupidity out of our culture. People need to stop just accepting what other people do, even if it is wrong, and start making a difference. If enough people will get off their butt and stand up, problems just like this one will slowly disappear. It is not hard to make the right choice, but it does take more effort than just being ignorant. What will you choose?
